5. A person who has given consent to the processing of personal data – pursuant to the provisions of GDPR and under the conditions set out in it – has the right to:
 - request from the controller access to personal data,
 - rectification or erasure of personal data or restriction of processing personal data,
 - object to their processing,
 - data portability,
 - lodging a complaint with a supervisory authority, which is the Office for the Protection of Personal Data (contact details are available on the office's website: www.giudo.gov.pl),
 - not to be subject to decisions which is based on automated processing, including profiling, that produce legal effects concerning the natural person or similarly significantly affect the natural person.
 6. REITER may use profiling for the purpose of direct marketing, but decisions made on its basis by REITER do not concern the conclusion or refusal to conclude a contract, or the possibility of using electronic services in an online store. The effect of using profiling may be, for example, granting a given person a rebate, sending a rebate code, reminding about unfinished purchases, sending a product proposal that may correspond to the interests or preferences of a given person, or offering better conditions compared to a standard offer. Despite profiling, a given person makes a free decision whether he will want to use the rebate received in this way, or better conditions and make a purchase in the Online Store. Profiling consists in the automatic analysis or forecast of the behavior of a given person on the website of an online store, e.g. by adding a specific product to the shopping cart, browsing a particular product page in the online store, or by analyzing the previous history of purchases in the online store. A prerequisite for such profiling is that REITER owns the personal data of a given person in order to be able to send it, e.g. a rebate code.
